954531 v1

PATENT
S/N 09/708,907

Docket No.: 1232-4658

Applicants have amended the claims to clarify an aspect of the present invention, which Applicants submit distinguishes the claimed invention from the cited prior art at least in this regard.

Specifically, independent claims 1, 28-31, 33, 60-63 and 65-68 have been amended to more clearly recite that an image processing system of the present invention includes control means which controls each of: capture of image data, creation of display image control data and information relative to the capture of the image data, and transmission of the image data and the display control data in accordance with a schedule designated in advance. The recited control means corresponds to upload process module 107 included in an image upload server 101 (Fig. 1), and support for this control means is found, for example, in the description from page 35, line 19 to page 36, line 8 and from page 37, line 26 to page 38, line 22 of the present specification.

That is, the schedule of the present invention is arranged so as to attain to execute a desired combination of image capture, creation of image information data from a template, and transmission of an image.

At least the above-described feature of the present invention is not taught or suggested by any of the cited references individually or in combination, and, in particular, Abrams, Amini or Needham.

In the Office Action, the Examiner refers to column 9, lines 14-17 of the reference of Amini and column 3, lines 54-56 of the reference of Needham with respect to the control means recited in the independent claims as pending. However, those descriptions merely teach to transmit image data in accordance with a timer and therefore fail to teach to control each of capture of image data, creation of display image control data and information relative to the capture of the image data, and transmission of the image data and the display control data in accordance with a schedule designated in advance, as recited in the amended independent claims 1, 28-31, 33, 60-63 and 65-68.

The Abrams reference teaches to transmit to a user, data, such as, time, date and data of pan, tilt and the like (see, e.g., paragraphs [0043] and [0049 thereof). However, Abrams is silent with regard to including control means for controlling the system in accordance with a schedule designated in advance. (See, Office Action, page 10-11). Further, Amini teaches to transmit a file name, date, time and the like (Amini at col. 12, lines 54-60), and Needham is directed towards a camera system for connection to a web server (Needham at col. 1, lines 13-15), comprising, inter alia, a processor that periodically uploads images captured by the video camera in accordance with one of a plurality of motion detection algorithms. (Needham at col. 2, lines 20-24).

Thus, neither the Abrams reference, nor the Needham reference teaches or suggests, alone or in combination, control of each of capture of image data, creation of display image control data and information relative to the capture of the image data, and transmission of the image data and the display control data in accordance with a schedule designated in advance, as recited in the amended independent claims 1, 28-31, 33, 60-63 and 65-68.

Independent claims 73-74 have been amended to more clearly recite that image and relative information, to be accumulated in accumulation means, are produced and transmitted to an image accumulation apparatus, in accordance with a schedule designated in advance. That is, both of the production and transmission of the image and relative information are effected in accordance with a schedule designated in advance. This feature of the present invention is not taught or suggested the cited reference of Needham, and consequently, it is not taught or suggested by the cited combination of Amini, Needham and Levy.
